Equipped with an internal ashpan that is sealed off from the main combustion chamber, the Rivera allows air to enter through the ashpan, feeding the fire from below via the stone grate. Both primary and secondary air controls are conveniently integrated into the door of the unit. The primary control doubles as the airwash system, keeping the glass clean to provide an unobstructed, crystal-clear view of the mesmerizing flames. The Rivera is more than just a heating solution—it's a statement piece that combines style, innovation, and functionality to create the ultimate modern fireplace experience.
